

With a presence on the geotextile markets since 1990, Alpe-Adria Textil s.r.l. is a company that specialises in the development, production and sale of Techno Textile products. Already possessing a CE marking for its products, the company is now aiming to update its systems of governance and control to the UNI EN ISO 9001:2015 standard.

AAT's objectives are:

- To return to an active balance, to improve profit margin;
- To supply products which meet the needs and expectations of clients at competitive prices;
- To supply products which conform to the standards required by its customers and set by the company, as well as meeting any legal requirements;
- To implement a process of continuous improvement which enables the reduction of disruption and delay, complaints and the associated costs via the continuous renewal of the production machinery inventory;
- To improve the production process through the development of more efficient textile technology;
- To build customer loyalty
- To take leading global companies as the model for improving its quality management systems.

In-house this should translate into:

- Continuous professional development of internal staff to inculcate a culture of quality and an awareness of the importance of the active participation by everyone in their day-to-day role;
- External training for technical staff at other companies;
- Active implementation by all the staff each in their own role of the contents of the manual, of procedures and of corporate quality instructions;
- Control and optimisation of waste;
- Continuous control of levels of production efficiency;
- Continuous control of levels of quality in the products supplied;
- Continuous monitoring of complaints and customer satisfaction;
- Continuous research into more performant raw materials.

As a consequence of the all the above, AAT expects:

- A market reputation that is solid and valued
- A deepening of already established relationships with existing clients and the acquisition of new clients;
- A solid financial position and to mitigate its losses.

AAT company management furthermore commits itself to review its quality management system each year in order to keep it continually up to date to meet the requirements of the company itself and of its clients, and to improve it in terms of efficacy and efficiency.
